Canada's economic goals subject of Deutsch speech

The Chairman of the Economic Council of Canada said yesterday that the Council should become more integrated with the government, like the economic planning body in France.

Dr. John J. Deutsch compared the Council to a continuous Royal Commission.

In his speech to the Economics and Political Science Club, he outlined the economic goals that Canada has set for itself. He said that they were high employment levels, reasonable stability of prices, a rapid rate of growth, and a reasonable distribution of wealth between the people and the regions of Canada.

He also noted that non-economic political and social goals often conflicted with the economic goals.

Even economic goals can sometimes conflict, Dr. Deutsch said. He gave as an example the case in which fuller employment, a desirable goal, led to difficulty in keeping prices stable.

He said that we depend on American capital because we could not support our economy on Canadian savings alone.

In answer to a question about how free we are to use our own economic policies, Dr. Deutsch said that our policies are dependent on those of the Americans because most of our money comes from the United States and a depression there would cause a reduction in income.

Immigration officials threaten to bar Leary from Canada

TORONTO (CUP) — The so-called "high priest" of LSD, Dr. Timothy Leary, may be barred from Canada when he tries to attend a festival called Perception '67 at Toronto's University College this weekend.

Leary is scheduled to lecture on Psychedelics and Religion, but a department of immigration official has told the event's organizers he may not be allowed to enter Canada because of a conviction for trafficking marijuana.

The lecturer, who was dismissed from Harvard University in 1963 after engaging in a series of controversial LSD experiments, was permitted to enter Canada last October for an appearance on a CBC television program.

At that time, Dr. Leary had no problem with immigration officials, as he hadn't been convicted and sentenced at that time.

Canadian Union of Students president Doug Ward has offered to represent the group sponsoring Perception '67 in negotiations with immigration officials.

UGEQ DELEGATES

Pending referendum results:

ASUS delegates to UGEQ Congress (Feb. 15-19) 14 bilingual delegates are required. Students pursuing a BA or BSc degree in any year are invited to apply. Leave names and telephone numbers at the Union switchboard before 3 pm Thursday.

SC members split on vote; Commerce rejects UGEQ

by SANDRA SCHECTER and LAZAR SARNA

A relatively quiet referendum campaign is nearing its end as the campus will decide tomorrow whether to belong to UGEQ, CUS or neither.

Yesterday, Students' Council members expressed divergent views on UGEQ in interviews with the Daily.

John Fekete (Arts and Science) expressed his desire to see McGill in UGEQ: "It would be naïve to say that UGEQ is an ideal or Utopia, or even to say that, realistically speaking, McGill's needs and objectives correspond entirely with those of UGEQ. However, I think the advantages outweigh the disadvantages."

Harvey Schachter (Commerce) objected to McGill's entry into the Union: "I consider UGEQ fascist," Schachter added, "I do commend Nelson for laying the facts on the line and not hiding the worst aspects of his organization from us."

Engineering representative Mark Wilson supported McGill's entry into UGEQ, although he had certain reservations. "I think McGill is ready for UGEQ, but I don't know if UGEQ is ready for McGill. McGill is a more radical and politicized campus than any other."

Wilson said he did not feel "personally threatened by unilingualism" but nevertheless wished to make communication to and from the Union accessible to English students in English.

Marilyn Dumaresq (Nursing) favored entry into UGEQ although she admitted that her faculty did not share the same views. "We have to start working on a provincial level," Miss Dumaresq said.

Bert Kidd (Arts and Science) felt that UGEQ would offer a "better voice in education." Kidd disagreed with UGEQ's policy of unilingualism. However, he emphasized that striving toward a bilingual organization "reinforces the need to join."

Commerce meeting

Meanwhile, 14 students at an open meeting of the Commerce Undergraduate Society yesterday took a decided stand against McGill entry into UGEQ.

The open meeting of Commerce students was officially convened, although the existence of a quorum was debated. There are about 400 students in Commerce. The question of a full quorum led Chairman Harvey Schachter, Commerce representative on Council, to declare that a final vote would not be held on the CUS-UGEQ issue.

Bill Bailey, claiming that he represented a majority of student opinion, said, "My outlook is Canadian and continental. I don't want to restrict myself to Quebec."

"The French have chosen isolation for themselves, and they have the perfect right to do this. We also have the same right to identify with the majority on the continent."

"I don't see why I have to confine myself to their outlook. I don't speak French very well — I have no need to speak it. I don't want to identify with Quebec; I want to identify with Canada."

Michael Layton questioned UGEQ's power of obtaining concessions from the provincial government. He said, "Jean-Jacques Bertrand says that non-UGEQ members can sit on advisory boards, if they request it. We can be more influential out of UGEQ."

Ryerson students ask for voice in administration

TORONTO (CUP) — In a 12-page brief, Ryerson Polytechnical Institute students are demanding a voice and a vote on the wholly administrative governmental structures within the institute.

Written by council president John Yeaman, the brief recommends such things as a principal's advisory committee composed of faculty, students and members of the board of directors, a board of governors with student representation, open Faculty Council meetings and direct student representation on the Faculty Council and pertinent Council committees.

PLUMBERS' PHILHARMONIC: Yes, the Plumbers' Philharmonic serenade is but one of many entertaining and informative events scheduled for Engineering Week, Feb. 6-12. The exuberant plumbers are shown above at the opening ceremonies.

Tito made it kosher

An article which appeared recently in the Montreal Star might serve to cast some light on the nebulous question of Canada's precise position in the Viet Nam conflict. According to a front-page story of Saturday, February 4, there seems to be a strong possibility that the Canadian cabinet will soon remove Chester Ronning from the unofficial post of special envoy to Viet Nam. The reasons for this action appear to be related to certain pressures emanating from the American Government. American officials have strongly objected to Mr. Ronning's public criticisms of U.S. policy in Viet Nam, and it seems that the Canadian Government has been made well aware of this.

It is well to remember that Mr. Ronning was brought out of retirement last year by the Canadian Government for the express purpose of travelling to Hanoi on a peace mission. The aim of this mission, supposedly, was to explore all avenues which could conceivably lead to a peaceful settlement of the war.

Mr. Ronning has clearly stated that the bombing of North Viet Nam must cease before peace negotiations can start. In the light of such remarks the reaction of American officials was a very predictable one. The position taken by the Canadian Government, however, is not so easy to explain. It appears that the Canadian Government does not object to the substance of Mr. Ronning's remarks, but feels instead that perhaps he has been indiscreet. It is interesting to speculate on exactly what is meant by this. Perhaps Mr. Ronning was indiscreet because he said what he felt was the truth. It seems, alas, that Mr. Ronning is to lose his job because he was unable to maintain the necessary "discretion" when faced with the cold facts.

The following remarks made recently by Canada's External Affairs Minister, Paul Martin, provide an interesting insight into Canada's position: "Do they believe that if a government — and I really mean the Canadian Government — made a series of strong public declarations the basis of its Viet Nam policy, the tangled and dangerous problem in that country would begin to unravel itself?" Mr. Martin's remarks were meant as a defence of Canada's policy of "discretion". In reality, Canada's policy, for the most part, has been one of silence.

Canada has indeed been very discreet, too discreet. Perhaps, as Mr. Martin suggests, a definite stand on the part of the Canadian Government would accomplish very little, since many other governments already oppose U.S. actions in Viet Nam with little apparent effect on American policy. The problem, however, is a moral one. Canada's silence makes this country an accomplice to American actions in Viet Nam.

Unfortunately, a shadow has been cast on the sincerity behind Canada's efforts to achieve peace in Viet Nam. If the Canadian Government is genuinely interested in finding a just and peaceful solution to the war, it must forget its obsession with "discretion".

On The Affirmative No

Dear Sir,

The opponents of UGEQ have been propagating the idea that we should not join an organization if we are against some of its ideas. It seems to me that we join a group only if we feel that it is in our best interests to do so, in spite of any differences in ideology.

Resistance wants to promote the freedom of the individual. But we can only be completely free if we do not bother anyone else. However, if we want to ask Mr. Johnson in Quebec for some more of our tax money back, in the form of grants, bursaries, and loans, we will have to join an organization and hence lose some of our freedom. We have our Students' Society, but that has proven to have no real influence in Quebec City. Maybe we can get UGEQ's help. One thing seems certain: Mr. Johnson will not give us one more cent unless he is forced to. If we do not start getting more aid, our fees must go up and McGill will degenerate. And Mr. Johnson will not be sorry.

Resistance says that if we join we must follow the UGEQ line. What happens if we do not? The worst that can happen is that UGEQ will kick us out and will support the present discrimination against the English. If our demands are reasonable, UGEQ will be held responsible for not co-operating, and we will be no worse off than before. I am sure, after the last two years, that if our UGEQ "leaders" differ with McGill students on any major issue, we will make enough noise so that no one will misunderstand where we stand.

Think before you vote. What is best for McGill students? An "Affirmative NO" will say "Yes, we will do nothing and go nowhere and be free".

Something Is Happening Here

Dear Sir,

I am writing to lodge the strongest possible protest about the way the University Centre Building Manager, Mr. John Jones, handles room reservations for campus clubs. I wish to refer specifically to an incident involving the McGill Liberal Club last week.

On November 14, I made reservations for the Union Ballroom for Friday February 10 at lunch hour for a speech by the Hon. Paul Martin, Secretary of State for External Affairs and Deputy Prime Minister of Canada.

At the beginning of January, in accordance with a notice posted by Mr. Jones asking students to confirm room reservation for 1967, I confirmed the reservation for February 10. Furthermore another member of the Liberal Club executive, in order to make sure that I had not forgotten to do so, also confirmed with Mr. Jones.

On Friday February 3, Mr. Jones saw me in the Union and told me that the ballroom would be unavailable for Mr. Martin's speech. His reasons were that Engineering Week pre-empted everything including reservations made three months earlier and confirmed a few weeks earlier. Not only was his cancellation made at very short notice, but it was also made in an unofficial "by the way" method. I wonder what would have happened if I had not seen him at the time. Would he have told me on Friday when Mr. Martin had arrived?

Although I have been able to make alternate arrangements for a room (Moyse Hall), I would suggest that the Students' Council undertake a serious re-examination of Mr. Jones' work during this year. I understand that other clubs have experienced similar problems with him.

Perhaps instead of complaints he is known to make about how hard it is to deal with students, more students should complain about how hard it is to deal with Mr. Jones.

Edward Goldenberg
Secretary, McGill Liberal Club

I Will Go No More A Maying

Dear Sir,

As a McGill student who has endured the self-inflicted heart-break and the society-inflicted torture of a pregnancy outside of marriage, I add my expression of horror in response to the obsolete and inhuman attitudes of those who cry "Morality!" in the face of any birth-control issue.

What are MORALS for, if not to perpetuate the good in mankind? What can SIN be, except the propagation of evil? By anyone's definition!

There is no more devastating result of any human behaviour than that evil which manifests itself in the existence of unwanted, and too often unloved, human beings. It seems more "sinful" to make means of preventing such evils nearly inaccessible, than it seems "moral" to preach hypocritical chastity to a generation which increasingly accepts responsibility in many areas often avoided by its elders.

The issue of the "pill" gives evidence that our generation is willing to accept responsibility for adult behaviour. Let's hope that within our collective lifetime, this issue will cease to be a controversy. Eventually, letters such as this one will be unnecessary — and even if they were written, perhaps there would be no stigma binding the writer to sign them

Demythologization

Dear Sir,

It turns out that what faculty needs is a seminar on how to read, not how to lecture. Dr. Walsh says that Mark Wilson's article viewed with "cynical amusement" his idea of a session to discuss the function of a university. What Wilson actually did was report with idealistic dismay faculty's cynical amusement at this proposal.

He says that Wilson's article, which, incidentally, was far too polite, was "far duller" than faculty's discussion; some who were present would question whether this was possible. Perhaps Dr. Walsh's upbeat demythologizing does show that the anecdotal or Will-Durant interpretation of history, interspersed with brilliantly insightful aperçus like "Motivation for study is varied and it would be surprising if material comfort and position were not high on the list", can sweep away some fuzzy thinking.

Pro Novo Organo

Smarten Up J. J.

Dear Sir,

J.J. Deutsch, Chairman of the Economic Council of Canada was at McGill yesterday, propagating some of the typical myths concerning Canada's economic development, and her economic dependence on the United States. For example, when asked about the possibility of lessening our dependent relations with the United States he said that, yes, we could become less dependent; we could stop American investment capital from coming into the country, but only at the price of much slower economic growth, rapidly rising unemployment at a time when our labour force is mushrooming and other frightening spectres. For we simply do not have enough native investment capital to undertake our own economic development, says Deutsch.

I am sure your readers will recognize this argument. It is applied not only to Canada, but is one of the favourite maxims of our political scientists and others concerning the underdeveloped nations of the world. Class after class of students is told that we, like the poor countries, need the benefits of American investment if we are to maintain or attain healthy economic growth rates, a decent standard of living for all, etc. It simply is not true. Canadians, by their work, generate plenty of capital, easily enough to finance an even higher rate of growth than we presently have. Why then do we seem to need so much foreign capital? Because we send enormous amounts of what should be called booty to the United States in the form of profit payments, etc.

Now if Canada simply expropriated foreign owned industries, and turned the surplus it produces to its own purposes...

So Deutsch is wrong in claiming that we cannot escape the effects of a depression in the United States. Yes J.J., that means socialism.

Moot Court winners to be decided tonight

The Faculty of Law will hold the finals of the Moot Court tournament tonight at 8:15 pm in the Moot Court Room of the new Chancellor Day Hall.

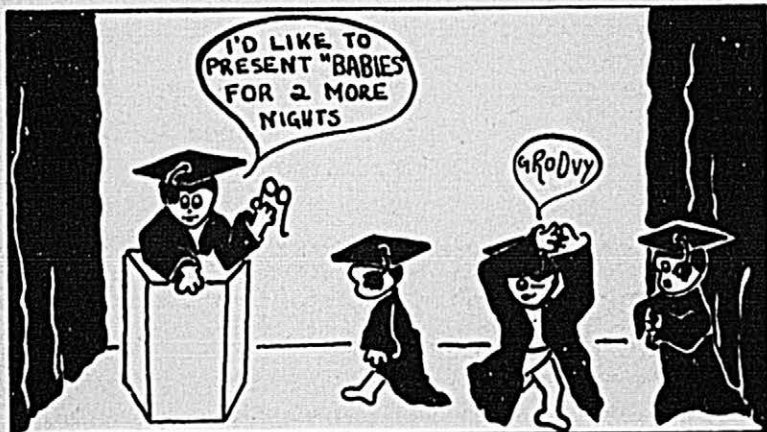

The law students will argue a fictitious case before the distinguished Bench: Chief Justice Lucien Tremblay of the Quebec Court of Appeal, who will act as the presiding judge, with Professor F. R. Scott of McGill's Faculty of Law and L.T. de Grandpré, a.c., vice president of the McGill Law Graduate Association as his colleagues.

The participants are Ronald Berger and Michael Worsoff for the Appellants, and Richard Beaulieu and Joel Silcoff for the Respondents.

The program is organized on a tournament basis, in which all but two student "firms", each consisting of two students, are eliminated, during the second year of law studies. The two finalist "firms" then meet in the third year for the Moot Court championship.

A trophy and a prize donated by the Law Graduates' Society are awarded to the winning firm. This year the winners of the tournament will meet a firm from Osgoode Hall Law School in a Moot Court which will take place on March 10.

The case to be argued is in the field of constitutional law. Those present will receive a short summary of the facts and will then argue the case.

"A very dead lot" at U of A

Faculty member hits students

EDMONTON (CUP) — The nationwide quest by university students for representation in university decision-making hasn't been joined by University of Alberta students, who left the activist Canadian Union of Students last fall.

"On the whole, I think they're a very dead lot," commented Dr. D.D. Betts, executive member on U of A's general faculty council, last week.

"I don't think students have agitated very vigorously for representation on the GFC here,"

Dr. Betts added. "One gathers they're not really very concerned."

He said U of A students would have a good chance of achieving representation if they tried.

"It would be valuable for us to hear from the students directly, and it would probably make the students happier.

"It would make them see that we're not all such mean old men."

Under Alberta's new universities act, provision is made for appointment of students at the discretion of general faculty council's statutory and elected members.

But thus far, there hasn't been any active student lobby for the same representation granted University of Calgary students two weeks ago under the same universities act, other than a U of A students' union brief presented before the legislation was passed.

U of A president Dr. Walter H. Johns, who as general faculty council chairman has promised the question will be considered by that body soon, says he doesn't know what the final decision will be.

His own view? "I'll be hanged in effigy, I suppose, but I feel students' views would be much more effective if presented at the level of the classroom and the individual instructor," he said last week.

WUS to hold panel on developing countries

The World University Service Committee will sponsor a panel discussion with three faculty members, on "The Role of Universities in the National Development of Developing Countries", tonight in L26 at 8 pm.

Prof. R. F. Salisbury, Chairman of the Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology, is a member of the volunteer service association in New Guinea for the development of the first university there. He has also been concerned with setting up a Caribbean program for training research workers at McGill.

Prof. Demas, of the Dept. of Economics, is from Trinidad, and is involved in the government economic planning in that country. Assistant Prof. Saberwal, of the Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology, is originally from India, and has done research in Kenya.

Saberwal feels that overseas volunteers, and university faculty doing research in developing nations, have been "trained into roles that are part of Western society, and have to create new roles which are more relevant to the situation in which they are working".

Prof. Salisbury feels that "money is important", but it should be given "with no strings attached", so that it "can be used by the recipients as they want to use it".

Demas agrees: "There are certain difficulties in the social sciences, and even in technology, because of differences in economic conditions". Thus, the person working overseas "has to go through a process of un-learning".

WUS, which is sponsoring this discussion, sends assistance to universities in developing countries as part of its program. It will hold a SHARE campaign, Feb. 22-24, for this purpose.

STUDENTS' COUNCIL

APPLICATIONS FOR STUDENT REPRESENTATION ON COMMITTEES OF UNIVERSITY SENATE 1967-1968

The Students' Society places representatives on certain University Senate committees. These committees act in a dual capacity: they advise the Senate and Administration on activities coming within their frame of reference, and perform certain delegated functions.

The location of students as full voting members on these committees can contribute to the democratization of University structures. Students will be provided with opportunities to observe the workings of Senate Committees; to criticize current policies and proposals as representatives of the Students' Society; and to propose solutions to problems which affect the student body.

Applications are called for:

Officer of University Relations

To co-ordinate relations with the University Senate and Administration, especially with respect to student representation. He will participate in planning and communication and be responsible to the Students' Council.

One Representative on each of the following:

University Libraries Committee

Advises the Senate on matters concerning planning and policy for the entire library system. Meets at least once every two months.

University Placement Committee

Works with the Placement Service on summer, part-time, and permanent employment for students and graduates. The summer job problem requires original thinking and hard work. Meets irregularly, as required.

University Scholarships Committee

Advises the Senate on accepting donations of scholarships. A sub-committee grants scholarships. Meets irregularly at least twice a year.

Committee on Student Health

Advises the Principal and Senate on matters relating to student health and the Health Service. Meets in November and as required.

Committee on Sessional Dates

Advises the Senate on the Academic Calendar for the upcoming year. Meets in December.

Student Aid Appeals Committee (ad hoc)

Hears appeals for grants of financial aid rejected by Office of Student Aid. Meets "as required", has not yet met.

University Libraries Liaison Committee

(3 representatives)

Acts as a liaison between students and the University Libraries Committee. Deals with specific problems of students using the libraries. Meets once a month or as required.

Applications should be made to the S. C. Office, first floor of the Union.
